Remembering President Lincoln

By Terry and Kim Kovel resident Abraham Lincoln has been memorialized in many ways since his death in 1860, but here are things that few people remember today.

 The president and his wife, Mary Todd, had four sons. Three died young.
 "Eddie" (Edward Baker) Lincoln, born in 1846, died at 3 years old in 1850.
 "Willie" (William Wallace) was born in 1850 and died in 1862 at the age of 11. Son Thomas, called "Tad," was born in 1853 and died at 18 in 1871. But their first-born son, Robert Todd, was born in 1843 and lived until 1926, passing at the age of 82.

2. President Lincoln was the tallest president. He was 6 feet, 4 inches tall.

3. Lincoln's birthday is Feb. 12, 1809.

4. President Lincoln did not smoke and rarely drank alcohol. He drank water with meals.

Try some of President Lincoln's favorite foods on President's Day. One of his favorites were apples. He held an apple with his thumb and forefinger, and ate it from the bottom. Some say he also liked chicken fricassee with biscuits, and most reports say he enjoyed oyster stew.

This folk-art carving of President Abraham Lincoln was made from a tree stump in the late 1800s. It is 47 inches tall. The sculpture sold for $1,800 at a recent Garth's auction.

Mary Todd Lincoln used "Miss Leslie's Complete Cookery" cookbook that is still available at bookstores today.

Celebrity Checks - Signatures More Prized Than Cash

By Robert Reed

Celebrities don't write checks anymore. There are other ways of paying bills for the rich and famous including credit cards and electronic means.

Paper checks, however, were the standard means for responding to debt in the good old days. Consequently, such checks signed by celebrities over the decades have become quite popular with autograph collectors and others.

The check movie actress Marilyn Monroe signed with full script MM flourished back in 1950 might now be worth considerably more than the $200 she once cashed it for.

Historically paper checks have been used in civilization for centuries. After being pioneered in Europe, the first printed checks began appearing in America early in the 1700s. Generally, however, such checks were not frequently in use in the United States until after the Civil War.

Several years ago, the legendary celebrity and sports memorabilia auction house, Leland's offered the personal check of General Winfield Scott. The famous military officer and one-time presidential candidate signed the check in the 1860s. He died shortly after the end of the Civil War.

A far more fascinating celebrity check, one signed by Sitting Bull and his adopted son One Bull, was also at one time offered by Leland's. It was Sitting Bull who directed the famed Battle of Little Bighorn in 1876. It was that battle that killed General George Armstrong Custer and some 200 soldiers. Sitting Bull was the chief of the Sioux Indian nation and spiritual leader of the Lakota. One Bull was said to have been directly involved in the battle. The check, drawn on the First National Bank of La Fayette, Indiana in 1884, was valued at thousands of dollars.

Other items included an 1889 check from famed American poet Walt Whitman. Written just a few years before his death, the amount was for $12.30 on the National Bank at Camden, Massachusetts.

More paper checks were in use early in the 20^{th} century and thus more would-be celebrities were filling them out and signing them in full.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Q: I have a Rudolph, New York pianola with serial number 63034. It was reconditioned 25 years ago into a piano and no longer works as a pianola. It's in good condition and has been tuned regularly. What year was it made and what might it be worth? A: Pianolas, or player pianos, were popular in the late 19th and early 20th century. The instrument works by pumping the foot pedals to operate bellows that make the keys play without being Continued on page 7

Celebrity Checks

Continued from page 1 sevelt in 1910 or a group of checks from Yukon adventurer and White Fang au-thor Jack London written between 1911 and 1914. The London group of 13 checks were written in the years just before his death from alcoholism at age 40.

A group of checks auctioned nationally were signed by baseball great Honus Wagner. Known as the Flying Dutchman, Wagner became even more famous for his image on one of baseball's most valuable tobac-co cards. The checks with a flowing signature in black fountain pen were written mainly from 1919 to 1920.

From time to time checks signed by baseball immortal Babe Ruth surface in auction houses. One such check, an American League payroll check to Ruth, came to light in recent years. It was signed George H. Ruth in the form the Yankee slugger used only in formal documents. The payroll amount was $7,288-what the Babe was paid every two weeks in 1930.

Just one year earlier a reporter asked Ruth why he was making more money than the President of the United States. Ruth quipped, "Because I had a better year than he did." A seldom seen payroll check of President Franklin D. Roosevelt has also been offered at Leland's. Dated June 30, 1934 the amount was for $5,625. According to Leland's it was only the second FDR payroll check ever offered to the public.

Checks signed by sex goddess and Hollywood icon Marilyn Monroe are clearly prized by collectors. One from 1950 when Miss Monroe was just a 24-year-old minor star, made out for a $200 case, created a great deal of excitement among collectors. A second MM check, written in 1953 by the platinum-blonde for $5 also attracted interest at the auction house.

It was during the 1950s that automation came into use with the nation's paper checks. The Bank of America and the Stanford Research Institute developed a coded numbering system for checks in an effort to ease massive check handling by hand. Gradually each check was provided with a lower placed Magnetic Ink Character Recognition in revolutionize sorting.

Other notable celebrity checks auctioned include a 1950s triple-signed document from Hollywood star James Dean, who died tragically at age 24. Dean signed a $10 check made out to himself and endorsed by himself in 1953. It was cashed at The Chase National Bank.

Checks of Hollywood great Greta Garbo have occasionally come into the marketplace. Leland's once auc-tioned a Garbo check written out to the Accurate Cleaning Company for $48.71. The check was not canceled. Reportedly, the company never cashed her checks and as a result Garbo ended up firing them. Still the 'saved' check from Miss Hollywood herself turned out to be much more valuable than the original cleaning bill. Other 'star' checkscashed or otherwise-subject to sale to collectors extend from baseball's Ty Cobb and football's Vince Lombardi to showbiz's Madonna and movieland's W.C. Fields.

Various groupings of celebrity checks are regularly offered by leading auction houses as well. The many range from astronauts and baseball players of the past to B-list Hollywood movie stars and literary achievers.

At their height paper checks in vast numbers were returned to their signatory. Often they were stored 'shoebox style' by the hundreds, if not thousands, to provide necessary records of payment for various venues including the Internal Revenue Service. As record-keeping methods evolved, saving old paper checks became less and less fashionable or necessary. Often these returned-by-the-bank checks ended up left behind for disposal by relatives and estate man-agers. A smaller portion of celebrity checks came from sources such as Greta Garbo's Accuracy Clean-ing Company who kept the checks and refused cash or deposit them at the bank.

Either way, not many celebrities or even average citizens are bothering with paper checks compared to the past century. Latest figures from the federal government indicate only 10 percent of consumer payments at the point of sale are being paid by paper check these days.

Hundreds of customers braved the cold to invade the Bricker Building at the Ohio Expo Center January 26 and 27 for a new Scott Antique Markets adventure

Shoppers browsed through thousands of unique items available for sale Saturday and Sunday. In one row customers flipped through vintage multiplication flash cards, tried on jewelry in various animal shapes, looked at a stack of mirrors and picked out various kitchen items. In another row customers checked out a row of rocking chairs, clock mechanisms, vintage postcards and live edge wooden tables. A group of customers was poring over boxes and binders of old photographs looking for a unique piece to adu to their collections. In the next aisle a rack of vintage clothing was being combed through by a mother and daughter. One shopper stopped in her tracks to look at a brilliant orange stacking canister set for flour, coffee, tea and sugar.

Many shoppers found success and went home with amazing pieces. Beautiful glassware, rare comic books, vintage toys, unique art and classic furniture were taken to new homes to be used and admired.

One customer walked out with a cart full of knickknacks for her home including a statue, a painting and various other forms of art. Another carried out a violin, complete with a beautiful black case. Yet another customer had his hands full with a large box of tools on his way out the door.

Q: I have a Winterling Bavaria dinnerware set and can't find the pattern anywhere to see what it's worth. I have 22 saucers, 11 dinner plates and some other things. Can you tell me what it's worth?

A: Porzellanfabrik Gebruder Winterling (Brothers Winterling Porcelain Factory) was in business in Roslau, Bavaria under various names beginning in 1906. Winter-ling went bankrupt in 2000. The company made over a thousand different patterns. Most weren't named. You have an odd number of saucers and plates, not a complete set. Partial sets are hard to sell. You can get an estimate of value by seeing what similar Winterling Bavaria prices sell for online.

Q: I bought a uranium jadeite shank button with overlay pressed brass buck. It's slightly larger than a half dollar and glows beautifully. I bought if from a seller in the Czech Republic who said it was rare. I was surprised how inexpensive it was for the quality. I know it was made before World War II but have no other information. Can you tell me anything else about it?

A: Uranium glass was first made in the 1830s. The bright yellow-green color, also called vaseline glass, is produced by adding a small amount of uranium to melted glass. The glass glows if put under an ultraviolet light. Old uranium glass may be as much as 25 percent uranium, but newer glass con-tains about only 2 percent uranium. Some uranium was mined in what is now the Czech Republic. Production stopped during World War II, when uranium was need-ed for the war effort. When production resumed after the war, depleted uranium was used.
